On the 22d at Night a Fire broke out at Neuenholm, not far from the Place where the Daniſh Fleet lay at Anchor, but by the timely care of Admiral Guldenlieu it was extinguiſh'd, without doing much Damage. Count Flemming is arrived at Berlin, where he waits for the return of his Pruſſian Majeſty, and from thence he is to go to the King his Maſter in Poland, before he ſets out for the Congreſs at Brunſwick.
